Religion eBooks are here! The library has recently purchased 112 new religion & theology ebooks (including commentaries and Bible dictionaries) which you can read online or download on your mobile device. Access these ebooks through the library catalog, SAGU Discovery, or the EBSCO eBooks Database.

Interlibrary Loan (ILL)

Can’t find the book or article you’re looking for? ILL lets you borrow resources from other libraries at no charge to you! You can request materials from the library’s ILL request form, by emailing library@sagu.edu, or from within SAGU Discovery.

Your Input Wanted!

We value your input! We welcome suggestions to improve the library in our Suggestions Box located at the circulation desk, as well as recommendations for good resources you come across in your research. Please contact Radonna Holmes at rholmes@sagu.edu with all recommendations.

New Database!

Slavery in America and the World: History, Culture & Law

The library is proud to present HeinOnline’s newest database: Slavery in America and the World: History, Culture & Law. This database brings together all legal materials related to slavery in the English-speaking world. Resources date well into the 20th century, following the progress of the cases related to slavery. Researchers will be pleased to find a clean, easy to use interface, with search results highlighting the relevant search terms. The database provides citations for all resources in MLA and APA, as well as Chicago (Chicago citations can be easily modified to Turabian format). Access this database from the library’s Online Databases page or by clicking here.
Study Zones

Do you need silence to study? Or do you need a little bit of noise around you? The library offers three different areas/zones where you can find the right noise level for your study needs. Library employees try their hardest to maintain appropriate volumes in each zone. If people are too loud in a quiet zone, please do not hesitate to let a librarian know.

Collaborative Zones are marked with yellow signs and make up most of the downstairs area. In this zone you may work on group projects, talk at normal levels, and make quiet phone calls.

Quiet Zones are marked with orange signs and make up most of the upstairs area. In this zone you may whisper and keep your phone on silent; groups are not encouraged in this area.

Deep Quiet Zones are marked with blue signs and are available in various places upstairs. In this zone you may study individually and listen to music inaudible to others; talking/whispering is not allowed in this area.
